Two Wells Drilling In Local Gas Field

Drilling activities in the local gas fields this week is confined to the Cameron-Cameron Mills area. At Cameron Dates and Sharpe are drilling a well for McGraw of Whitesville on the Bailey farm just west of the village. Considerable difficulty has been met by the drillers in shutting water off from the hole, it being necessary to pull pipe and ream several times. Water was finally shut off at 400 feet. The well is now approximately 500 feet deep. A little puff of gas has been encountered.

At Cameron Mills Bingham and associates have a new location on the Ray Angel town lot. Cole Bros., the drilling contractors on this well have moved their rig from the Crawford farm and have finished spudding in the hole. Yesterday the drillers were down a little more than 100 feet.

Boy Heroes To Go Thru Addison To World's Fair

The following story of six boys who will travel to the World's Fair should be of interest to local people. Arrangements are being made to greet these lads when they pass through Addison next Monday.

—Ed's note

When the Erie Limited, the fast and luxuriously equipped New York-Chicago passenger train of the Erie Railroad, leaves Jersey City on the morning of June 26th, it will have among its passengers enroute to Chicago for a week's visit amid the wonders of the Century of Progress Exposition, six sturdy boys traveling as special guests of the management of the Railroad.

The boys, with ages ranging between 11 and 15 years, are Randolph Borshe, Jake Melnizlk, Douglas Fleming, Frank Mazzola, Milke Mazzola and John Murdock, all from the Passaic Home and Orphan Asylum of Passaic, N. J. They are the boys who recently came into national fame and made the front page of almost every newspaper in the country when they discovered a washout on the Erie tracks near their home and flagged with their coats an approaching commuter train. The trip to Chicago, accompanied by the matron of their home, Mrs. Emma G. McCrea, is a tribute from the management of the Erie to their alertness and quick thinking and a recognition of their position as youthful disciples of safety. Their date of departure for Chicago was fixed by Mrs. McCrea to take place at the close of their school term.

While in Chicago Mrs. McCrea and her boys will be guests at the Palmer House, and arrangements have already been made through officials of the Century of Progress Exposition for them to see everything that the hearts of lads running from 11 to 15 years can wish for or desire. In addition, they will

Painted Post Highway Nearly Complete Today

Work of pouring concrete on the new Addison-Painted Post road was completed last Saturday, after one of the quickest rush jobs ever seen in this vicinity. In less than a months working time both sides of this strip of concrete practically four miles long, have been poured, while traffic has been maintained The last side of this road will undoubtedly be fully opened sometime next week, as only approximately one mile remains covered with hay, and additional sections are being opened to traffic each day.

Concrete work on the Addison-Painted Post road was started shortly after the 15th of May and on Saturday, June 3, the first side had all been laid. After one or two days wait one half mile of the east end of the new highway was thrown open and the mixer started on its second trip towards Addison. Twelve days later the second side of the road had been poured, with the exception of a twenty foot block left for a driveway at the Erwins grove. This was filled in Monday and the mixer moved to finish the approach between the Susquehana Trail and the Liberty Highway.

A fleet of trucks is now busy making fills for the shoulders of the road, and it is expected the new highway will be completed, shoulders and all, by the first of July.

The piers for the new overhead crossing near Gangs Mills are now finished and work of erecting the steel was started this week. Aside from the short detour at this bridge travel on this highwey will be unobstructed within a few days.

Agriculture Dept. To Be Added to Addison School

The Addison Board of Education having decided to open a new Agriculture course in the local high school, a contract was given Frank Finerty, last week to take charge of the new department. Mr. Finerty graduated from the College of Agriculture at Cornell University this week, and will continue his studies at the University during the summer school season, coming to Addison about the 20th of August to start his work.

In determining to install the new course the board was influenced by a unmber of needs. The school population has increased each year the new building has been occupied, and the number of students in the academic department has now become so large that the present staff of teachers would not be able to handle any further increase.

This increased enrollment has come largely from the country around Addison, until last year the foreign population in the high school was greater than the resident population. A great many of the students coming to Addison High School from outside, do so without any expectation of going on to any higher institution of learning. Consequently, the preparatory course which a large part of these students take, does not fit them for the work which they usually turn to on leaving school.

As Addison is located in an agricultural district many of the students leaving the school return to the livelihood to which they are accustomed, that is farming. Consequently for a great many of these boys a course in agriculture and manuel arts is more important, than the study of languages and higher mathamatics. The new course will fill this long felt want for students who intend to follow the business of farming.

The federal government pays between twenty-five and forty per cent of the salary of a high school teacher of agriculture, so the cost of instruction will be low. The new teacher is hired on a twelve months basis, practically his entire time in the summer be devoted to supervising projects of his students on their various farms.

The course will be installed in the old gymnasium building where there is ample room for this new department. Addison will be the only school within a wide area which offers an agriculture course to its students. It is expected the addition of this department will make the local school more popular than ever through the communities surrounding Addison.

Joseph Bailey Goes Into Race For Sheriff

Former Addison man, master of Pomona Grange, throws his hat into ring — To run on economy platform.

To the Republican Electors of Steuben County:

In the midst of depression, inflation, nation-wide welfare relief work and hard times, it is plain that the main issue before the people of today is ECONOMY.

It is with this condition in mind, knowing the heavy burden of debt in bond issues which Steuben County is carrying and paying interest on, knowing how the taxpayers of this county are struggling to make both ends meet, and in many cases not succeeding, which is proven by the record of the number of properties in the county tax sales, and knowing that these conditions can be greatly improved through less expensive town, county and state administrations I now come before you and ask your support for the Republican nomination for Sheriff.

In the first place I wish to make it plain and clear that if I am elected Sheriff I will run the office. I have made no promises either directly or indirectly and shall make no promises, to any person or organization to permit them to dictate or run the office in return for their support. I shall be responsible to all the people of the county and to them alone.

I was born in Steuben county and have always lived here. I have always had to earn my own way. I know the value of a dollar. I know how hard money comes to the farmers and to the laboring people because I have been both.

I was born in Corning August 15,

Addison Gold Star Mother Tells Her Experience in France

Mrs. Stella Crane, Addison gold star mother, returned Friday from a trip to France where she visited the grave of her son. Mrs. Crane was the only woman from this vicinity who went this year, with the government conducted tour of war graves in France.

Her son, Harry L. Crane, was a wagoner in the 3rd Ambulance Company of the first Sanitary Train, First Division. He was wounded in action at the St. Mihiel area, Oct. 21, 1918. He died of these wounds and was buried at St. Mihiel Cemetery located at Thiancourt, Meurthe-et-Moselle, France. Before going to France, the Addison yonug man saw a year's military service in Mexico.

Mrs. Crane reported to an Advertiser correspondent that she enjoyed her journey thoroughly from beginning to end. She found the grave of her soldier son was kept in excellent condition, and every courtesy was shown the party of 129 war mothers and widows at all times.

She left Addison May 15, spending one day sight seeing in New York before sailing from port at noon May 17, on the steam ship President Harding. Pleasant weather was encountered on the entire crossing, the ship making good time through a wonderfully smooth sea. Anchor was dropped about one o'clock May 24, at Cobh, Ireland. May 25, a stop was made at Plymouth England, where mail was unloaded for Scotland and other parts of the British Isles.

Landing was made at Havre, France, at six o'clock in the evening, and at seven the party left by train for Paris. Mrs. Crane commented on the fact the train differed from American trains, the cars being smaller and divided into compartments with six seats to a compartment. The compartments were comfortable although the road seemed rathe rough. Arriving at Paris at ten, the party was met by conducting officer Hugh G. Cotton, nurse M. L. Juidy and runner Leon Koopman, and taken to a hotel.

The following day was spent sight-seeing. Among the notable places visited was the Avenue du President Wilson, Place de l'Alma, Church of the Madileine, Place de la Republique, Place de la Bastile, Church de St. Germain, Church de St. Sulpice, Chamber of Deputies and Invalides Railroad station. The next day, which happened to be Saturday, the group attended a ceremony at the Arc de Tri-

Big Time Planned for Old Home Day at Goodhue Lake July 4th

Plans for the third annual Old Home Day to be held this year at Goodhue Lake on the Fourth of July are rounding into shape rapidly, according to John Coleman, president of the committee in charge.

Mr. Coleman, assisted by Chauncey Hibbard, vice president, and Lawrence Hanrahan, secretary-treasurer, have completed plans for the program of events which will open at 10 o'clock in the morning with water races and speeches, and close late at night with basket suppers and community singing.

The committee has been very fortunate in securing the services of Michael Cahill, Corning lawyer and native of Thurston, for the main speaker of the day. He will address the merry-makers at 2 o'clock. Charles L. Crane of Addison will speak later in the afternoon.

Last year Old Home Day was held at Emery Chase's grove, but will be held at Goodhue Lake this year to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Goodhue Lake postoffice.

Father William J. Killackey of Addison will ask the blessing at the noon-day basket luncheon and the Rev. John V. Axtell will lead the community singing in the evening. The Rev. Axtell will also bring a selected group of his choir boys who will render several songs during the afternoon program. The Children's Brass Band of Rathbone, led by Mrs. Sam Fowler, will play during the day as well as the Addison High School Band. It is hoped that the Campbell High School Band in charge of Miss Minnie Cahill will also be present.

Residents of Thurston are planning to take part in the festivities and Jesse Eddy will be in charge of this part of the program. Edgar Thompson has arranged for a talk by a Dairymen's League representative which will take place at 11 o'clock in the morning.

Among the special features of the day will be an exhibition of clog dancing of the past and present. Two elderly ladies of this locality will show how this type of dancing was done when grandmother was a girl and will be garbed in appropriate costumes. Little Petie Whitmore will give his interpretation of present day clogging. Master Ralph Vona and his sister Gloria have

HOUNDING THE HOARDERS

Federal Attorney General Cummings has set his sleuth hounds loose, ordered to run to earth the gold hoarders who refused to disgorge the precious metal they were holding, when President Roosevelt issued his anti-hoarding proclamation. Of the first 1,838 queried, 95 who ar esupposed to have gold hoards totaling $660,601, have flatly refused to turn the money over to the government. Their names have been delivered to the Department of Justice criminal division. Declared "General" Cummings: "I have no patience with people who follow a course which in war time would class them as slackers. If I have to make an example of some people, I'll do it cheerfully".

So, we evidently are soon to see whether a man can be compelled to give up gold that was honestly acquired, for paper money from which the metal backing has been removed. Probably some of these people will be compelled to give up their money or will sacrifice their liberty for a principle, because it seems that the present administration has been handed powers little short of those held by the old feudal kings.

Whatever the outcome of this test, there are sure to be a great many people heartily in sympathy with those who refuse to part with that which actually belongs to them. This is epecially true since the administration has sought and been given powers to tinker with the currency, powers that may yet reduce a paper dollar to a fraction of its present (or March 3rd) monetary value.

We would match our patriotism with the next man's, and have never been in favor of hoarding at any time, or withdrawing money from banks which was needed to bolster up the Nation's banking reserve. Yet, we are not convinced of the justice of any democratic form of government making a gesture to forcibly take gold from its citizens and handing them in exchange paper currency of undetermined value.

Those of us who happen to live through the next ten years may look back on this epoch as a period of political hodge podge, during which we all become unduly excited over "bogies" that existed only in imagination. Meanwhile the most of us have little cause to worry about government sleuths hounding us down in search of gold, for most of us haven't a gold sou to our names.

IT'S TIME TO DELIVER

"During the period of thirteen years from 1919 to 1932 our Federal Government was perhaps the most expensive government that ever existed among men . . .", said Senator McKellar of Tennessee, recently. "Up to the World War our national expenditures had never reached a billion dollars per year. For ten years after the war the entire expense reached the enormous average figure of over five billions a year, and just running expenses, exclusive of interest paid on the national debt and all sums paid to veterans, exceeded the vast sum of three billion dollars."

As the Senator further observed, the war was partially guilty for this, but guiltier yet was the boom prosperity of the times, which had the direct result of the enormous expansion in both business and government. Since the boom passed away business has cut its sails to the prevailing wind; government has refused to. And the consequence of that tax burden is seen on every hand. It is seen in bread-lines because the weight of taxation has forced industries to retrench and plants to close entirely. It is seen in the farming states—where thousands of farms, large and small, have been foreclosed for failure to pay taxes. It is seen in the resident districts of towns and cities—where thousands of homes have been lost for the same reason.

The Federal Government has made a start toward economy. It will, and must, go farther. And states, counties and municipalities must fall into line.

Every public official stressed tax reduction in his pre-election promises, and it is time the goods were delivered.

DIPLOMACY VS BRAIN TRUST

It was no surprise to most Americans that when the World Conference convened last week, three of the first foreign diplomats to speak, immediately embraced the opportunity to break their words. It had been agreed that the question of debts be left out of that early discussion, but the diplomats lost do time in starting to flay the United States on the debt quesion.

Will we ever learn that to a European, no promise is a promise if it affects his pocketbook? In 1918 when men and money were being poured into the war by this country to make Europe temporarily safe for the French and British, the United States was the greatest country on earth, even though the snobbish British (h)officers did turn their noses up at American soldiers on the parade grounds. But like the newly married bride, "now it is a very different thing".

We Americans can beat the entire world when it comes to straight business undertakings, but there is one art at which we are "babes in the woods." That is the art of diplomacy. We send our smartest politicians to Europe to sit in at a conference, and before the Americans know the game has been started the Europeans have the cards all stacked with the aces just where they know they can reach in and pull them out.

If only Americans could learn to leave European affairs alone, we might throw overboard the war debts, BUT NOT FORGET THEM. But Americans will not leave European affairs alone, so the next best bet for the United States is to keep holding the war debts over the heads of European countries and keep them from getting in debt here all over again.

We understand that the No. 1 man in President Roosevelt's Brain Trust is all for negotiating a deal with Europe, regardless of what is costs good old Uncle Sam. This "Professor" is over in England now trying his hand in this game of diplomacy, at which he is probably as green as a willow tree. After he has tried his hand and failed, then No. 2 member of the Brain Trust is to be given his opportunity to try to put the U. S. A. on an isolation program. That would mean our folks must eat at home, buy at home and forget Euprope all they could.

The way those European diplomats started flaying Americans the first time they had a chance to speak, makes it look as if No. 2 member of the Brain Trust would have a chance to try out his formula, soon. All power to him.

A PLAN FOR COOPERATIVE ACTION

The first upward movement in two years in the price paid to dairymen for their milk, was registered recently in New York. It was put into effect by the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, a pioneer in the field. The increase amounts to 30 cents per hundred pounds for milk used in manufacturing fluid cream, and followed an order issued by the new State Milk Control Board, at the recommendation of the farmers' cooperative organization.

This is indicative of how a sound, well-established cooperative can aid the farmers. It does more than merely act as his agent in buying or selling goods. It can help to shape legislative policies. It has an influence that no individual farmer can possibly have. It is looked to as an authority on farm conditions. And, in the long run, it is the most powerful of all factors in bringing the producer a larger share of the final selling price of his product.

It might well be pointed out, in this connection, that the cooperatives are not trying to "stick" the buyer. They are not trying to make him pay an excessive price for milk or bread or clothing or anything else. In the past the farmer has continually taken the short end—when prices dropped, the cut came out of his share, rather than the middleman's. And when prices rose, he was the last to feel it. The cooperatives are simply working to equalize this, and to build a sound and prosperous agricultural structure. That is to the interest of every citizen.

PRODUCTIVE WORK IS THE BEST

The only solution to the unemployment problem is the producing of PRODUCTIVE work for those who are now out of jobs.

All the charity in the world, good and necessary as it may be, cannot duplicate work that accomplishes something, and gives the person or the business that buys it an article or service of definite value. All the political relief schemes, well-intentioned as they are, amount to no more than doles when the money spent does not provide normal jobs and employment.

This measurement—productive work—should be the standard used by the individual in doing his bit to alleviate distress and provide employment. To most of us, property improvement is the answer. The average citizen, during the last three years, has been reluctant to spend money. He has let needed household repairs go undone. The result is that many homes are rapidly going to pieces, are becoming fire-traps, or are uncomfortable and insufficient to live in. Today the repairs, betterments and additions that will bring property up to snuff, can be made for a fraction of former costs and money so spent does a double duty. It gives the workmen PRODUCTIVE labor, and buys the property-owner improvements at bargain prices.

So go to the local merchants, carpenters and cement men and make plans for needed reconditioning of your buildings. Every dollar you spend will be a blow struck at depression. And remember that while charity is good, jobs and investments and productive work are essential to create profits from which indispensable charities are supported.

NO SUCCESS WITHOUT SINCERITY

SINCERITY glistened like sunshine through every sentence Jesus uttered; sincerity is the third essential. Many wealthy men have purchased newspapers with the idea of advancing their personal fortunes, or bringing about some political action in which they have a private interest. Such newspapers almost invariably fail. No matter how much money is spent on them, no matter how zealously the secret of their ownership is guarded, the readers are conscious that something is wrong. They feel that the voice of the editor is not his own. The public has a sixth sense for detecting insincerity; they know instinctively when words ring true.

Bruce Barton

It was the way Jesus looked at men, and the life he led among them that gave his words transforming power. What he was and what he said were one and the same thing. Nobody could stand at his side for even a minute without being persuaded that here was a man who loved people and considered even the humblest of them worthy of the best he had to give.

There is no superstition more deadening to a writer than the idea that he can "write down" to his readers. No man was ever big enough to build an enduring success on the basis of insincerity; but many comparatively small men, like Peter the Hermit or Billy Sunday, fired with conviction, have been able to create and sustain a very considerable influence.

Jesus was notably tolerant of almost all kinds of sinners. He liked the companionship of the rough and ready folk who were entirely outside the churches; he was tender toward unfortunate women; he had a special fondness for James and John whose ungovernable tempers had given them the title of "Sons of Thunder"; he forgave the weakness of Peter who denied him; and was not resentful at the unbelief of his near relatives and his native town.

But for one sin he had no mercy. He denounced the insincerity of the Pharisees in phrases which sting like the lash of a whip. They thought they had a first mortgage on the Kingdom of Heaven, and he told them scornfully that only those who become like little children have any chance of entering in.

Little children know no pretense. They are startlingly frank. They look at the world through clear eyes and say only what they think. No writer, no orator, no salesman exercises any large dominion in the world unless he can humble himself and partake of their nature.

"Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not love, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal," wrote Saint Paul.

Much brass has been sounded and many cymbals tinkled in the name of advertising; but the advertisements which persuade people to act are written by men who have an abiding respect for the intelligence of their readers, and a deep sincerity regarding the merits of the goods they have to sell.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare.

An air of intense and almost unrelieved gloom surrounds the World Economic Conference. American delegates, for the most part, have hope without expectation. Too many of the great European nations seem determined to pursue a relentless policy of economic isolation—and the inevitable result will be more embargoes, higher tariffs, further declines in already vanishing world trade. This same isolationist spirit menaces the success of the arms conference at Geneva.

The United States is throwing its entire influence on the side of disarmament, world peace, stimulated trade between nations and agreements for lowering and equalizing tariffs. Failing success in its efforts, it is prepared to embark on economic war with the rest of the nations, as a matter of self defense. It will work out a program designed to provide us with commercial independence so far as the rest of the world is concerned, and create a more self-contained national economy. The Administration definitely does not want this—but it is, indirectly, warming the other powers that if they refuse to cooperate, no course is left but American isolation.

Great hope for conference success is the influence of Mr. Roosevelt. Rumors, as yet neither denied nor affirmed, are prevalent that he will go to Londan, make a speech and return. Strength to the rumors is given by the preparation of a navy light cruiser for a long, non-military trip, at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. This ship can cross the Atlantic in record time—if President Roosevelt is on board, the world will see another dramatic gesture in interest of world amity.

A factor that is also important to world trade, is future action of the American government in controlling the dollar abroad. This will be attempted in the near future—means of doing it have not been definitely decided upon. It will probably take the form of a dollar stabilization program which, in effect, will resemble the much discussed, little-understood British Equalization Fund. The British Fund is part of the government's budget, and was recently increased from 150,000,000 to 350,000,000 pounds. The British government's monetary policy is, briefly: Maintenance of the internal price level, as distinct from the value of the pound abroad; continuance and, if possible, expansion of trade, and the checking of wide and sudden fluctuations in the exchange value of the pound. The Fund is used for these purposes—by keeping the pound down, in relation to the dollar, while the price level remains unchanged within England, an obvious trade advantage is obtained. The American government believes, as do most commentators, that some such action by this country must be taken if an explosion in foreign exchange, with consequent trade disruption, is to be prevented.

Oil is in the spotlight. President Roosevelt put it there in his letter to Vice-President Garner in which he requested that oil legislation receive immediate attention by Congress. "Request" is a polite word that might be translated into "demand" under present executive-legislative relations. The letter stated that it is apparently impossible to bring order out of chaos by state action only. Result was a bill introduced by Representative Marland, formerly president of a fair-sized oil company. The bill gives broad and sweeping powers to the Secretary of the Interior. Among them are: The power to fix maximum and minimum prices for oil; prorate production between pools within a state; determine market demand and allocate production among the producing states accordingly; regulate oil imports; establish minimum wage rates.

Financial papers hail the legislation as the end of cut-throat, ruinous oil competition, and a practical guarantee of a substantial rise in oil prices.

Business is on the up-grade. This is not prophecy, but fact. Improvement has been registered in various basis industries—steel, copper, hogs, wheat, corn, department store sales, etc. Recently the New York Times index of industrial activity advanced for the seventh consecutive week to the highest point in 17 months.

A good sign is the estimate for the U. S. winter wheat crop—337,485,000 bushels. This is 40 per cent smaller than the 1921-30 average, the smallest since 1904. It will be 45,000,000 bushels short of United States consumption. Prices jumped as soon as the official estimate was made public; the farmer smiled.

Interesting fact—it is not unusual for short wheat crops and resulting higher prices, to signify the breaking of depressions.

The trade picture is thus definitely optimistic. Low of depression was touched in June-July of last year. Since then the three general barometers— index of business activity, index of commodity prices, stock prices—have been moving up, with occasional reactions. For two months progress has been uninterrupted. The net business gain is said to be close to 25 per cent.

Of 657 contestants in a recent state-wide judging contest, 233 made perfect placings.

Clippings From Our Exchanges

No agreement has yet been reached in the strike of silk mill workers at Galeton for higher wages and sanitary working conditions. It is claimed women employees received from $3 to $6 per week while the men were paid from $6 to $9. From these wages 10 per cent was deducted to pay the $100 bond owned by each employee. The committee states that at the present low price received they have been operating at a slight loss since they have to meet the cut-throat price competition of sweat-shop mills that pay even a lower wage scale than that prevailing in Galeton. And there the matter stands with no immediate prospect of a settlement.

DECEPTIVE PACKAGES

An importation of process cheese from Finland, packed in round boxes having false bottoms, failed to get by the watchful eyes of inspectors of the Federal Food and Drug Administration in New York recently. Cheese from the same shipper had formerly been packed in 8-ounce boxes of the same size and shape as those detained, but the boxes were full of cheese and labeled as containing 8 ounces.

Later on the shipper reduced the quantity of cheese to 6 ounces. He changed the label accordingly and used pieces of cardboard to fill the box. Fnally, he cut the cheese to three ounces, but continued to use the 8-ounce box, adding a false bottom.

The importation was detained on the grounds of misbranding under the national pure food and drug law. The boxes bore an inconspicuous declaration of a net content of 3 ounces. The law requires that a plain and conspicuous statement of the exact quantity or weight of food contained be printed on all packaged foods shipped in interstate or foreign commerce.

FREE FUEL FROM FORESTS

Thousands of unemployed residents in the national forest regions cut their supply of fuel wood in the Federal forests last winter. In the last year, 18,000 persons in the Montana-northern Idaho region removed approximately 60,000 cords of dead timber.

This use of national forest wood under free permit, has not been confined to farmers and ranchers, but has been offered where available to the people of the towns and cities. Many city residents have cut their winter's fuel in the forests and hauled it to town in trucks or trailers. The national forests have usually benefited by the removal of dry wood, which in many places constituted a fire hazard, and thousands of unemployed men have put in time to advantage cutting their own fuel.

Will Government Assume a Role of Helpfulness or Dictatorship?

The Big Issue is Emerging

Albany, June 20—The big political issue of the near future in this country is gradually emerging. It has been obvious for several years past to the man in Albany who keeps his eyes and ears open. It has been thrust violently into the foreground within the past few months in Washington. It is not yet clearly defined in the mind of the man on the street, but he will be talking about it soon. It is not depression or industrial recovery, but it is becoming clearer on account of these factors. Simply stated, it is this: Shall we have cooperation in government, as opposed to dictatorship or bossism, with the initiative and enterprise of the individual left intact and the government as little in business as possible? Or shall the government gradually take over what it chooses of the business of the country and assume full control of the activities of those individuals whose business it does not choose to absorb?

As Seen in New York State

The trend of government in this State has been unmistakable. It is toward the latter of these two propositions. It began when Nathan Miller left the Governor's chair and has continued since. With the unwitting consent of the people, to whom a plausible case was made, authority has been gradually taken from them and placed in the hands of the Executive at Albany. State departments were consolidated on the plea of economy, but it has proven the most costly experiment in which the State has ever engaged. The power of making the budget, or deciding how much money shall be spent, has been taken from the people's representatives in the Legislature and placed with the executive, with similar results. In every activity the State has been extending its power and the authority of the people has been curtailed. The same influences that have brought this about are demanding the wiping out of county lines, with still more power at Albany. They are the influences which fought for complete political control of the sale of beer in Albany, with the wishes of the people of the various communities entirely eliminated.

The Steps at Washington

It is not necessary to refer to the steps in this direction which have been taken at Washington, for they are fresh in the public mind. And probably it would hardly be fair to do so, for they are all labeled as emergency measures, due to the depression, to be abandoned when that crisis passes. If they actually are abandoned, without a stiff battle, it will be something unique in history. There is no record where half a million job-holders, when told that their work was completed, cheerfully took themselves off the public payroll and went about getting a living some other way. And it is estimated that the number of new jobs—not counting those at manual labor in reforestation and other similar work—will fall not far short of a million.

Perhaps the People Want It

It is possible that the people of the country want this new type of government. It is quite certain, however, that they did not knowingly ask for it, nor have they even realized its gradual but certain approach. When they do, then will the issue be joined. And the odd thing about it is that the issue will be brought about by one of the great parties practically abandoning its time-honored principles. The Democratic party has always maintained that it stood for State rights, the largest possible liberty of the individual and economy. How far afield it has gone, he who runs may read in happenings of recent years in Albany and recent months in Washington.

The Training for Tiger Hunting

F. Trubee Davison, Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor last fall, accompanied by Mrs. Davison, last week sailed for Africa, where they will join Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, famous hunters, in the quest for lions and other specimens for the New York Museum of Natural History, of which Mr. Davison is president. They will use airplanes to locate the game. Mr. Davison expects to return to America in October and will be just in time to participate in what promises to be one of the biggest Tiger hunts ever seen in the jungles of New York City.

Have a Cheering Sound

These little bits of news given out by the Department of Agriculture and Markets have a very cheering sound: Dairy farmers are now receiving a larger part of the consumer's milk dollar than at any time since before the World War. For the first time April prices to producers were higher than those in March. The price of dairy cows is advancing in this State, with all indications that the advance will continue." That does not mean that the State's milk problem has been solved, but it does mean that some very definite results have been achieved by the Milk Control Board in the few weeks it has been in existence.

Sales Tax Used as a "Gouge"

Not unexpectedly, the State Tax Department has learned that a certai ntype of merchant is not only adding the new sales tax to the price of his goods, but a great deal besides. In one case reported, where the customer was unusually gullible, a suit of clothes had been advertised for $15, but when payment was made an additional $5 was exacted because of the tax. The department has under consideration a regulation forbidding such misrepresentations, under penalty of suspension of the retailer's license. The merchant who continues in business after such suspension is liable to a fine of $1000 or a year in prison.

The Bee's War Cry

The strawberry moon has passed and the warm springtime wind has become so hot that old Mr. Bear does not wander far from the deep woods and cool rocks.

It was the bear's custom, as with the red men whose homes are in the hot southland, to take a good snooze during the heat of the day. And on one of these days, he stretched out beside a high cool rock and dreamed in his sleep. In his dream, he thought he was eating juicy raspberries, which would soon be ripe, and he would occasionally open his mouth very, very wide.

A busy bee was flying around and around and thinking the bear's red mouth was a great red-throated flower, the bee flew into the yawning jaws of the bear.

The bear jumped to his feet, and just as the bee was about to sting his tongue, the bear pushed the bee out on the ground with his paw. The wings of the bee had become wet while in the mouth of the bear; and so, while the little bee stood there drying his wings, the old bear gave him a good lecture about coming into places where he was not invited.

The bees had a council late that afternoon and they declared war on the bears. The bears pleaded for peace since they knew the bees put honey in the trees that the bears like so well. And so the bees and the bears held a common council and a smart old bear told the bees that they should give warning yells when they came around. Ever since that day the bees all hum to tell the bears to close their mouths when taking a noon-day sleep in the hot summer time.

Feather pillows should be aired in the shade on a windy day.

Mrs. Moser tells countless interesting things concerning conditions in Idaho where she lives on a ranch where they irrigate. Sugar beets are a profitable crop, oats are produced at the rate of 60 bushels per acre and wheat at the rate of ninety bushel per acre. Many sheep are also raised. In her opinion New York residents fail to appreciate the beauty of the forest-clad hills and winding roads—in her opinion New York State is far more beautiful than California because it is naturally beautiful while California to a large extent is man-made beauty.

omphe, where a wreath was placed upon the grave of the unknown soldier. Tea at the restaurant Laurent. Then they visited the American Cathedral of the Holy Trinity, Clemenceau monument, and Elysee Palaca(residence of the French President).

Sunday they left Paris for Verdun, stopping for rest at Hotel de la Sirene, Meau. From that place they continued on to Rheims through Chateau Thierry and Dormans, arriving at Verdun at five o'clock that evening.

Monday they departed for St. Mihiel Cemetery. At that place their pictures were taken and a wreath of native flowers was given to each mother to deposit upon her son's grave. After lunch at the cemetery a sight-seeing trip was taken over the battlefields. Mrs. Crane stated that the crops looked good, but some sections are not tilled, because in working the soil so many unexploded shells were set off the work was extremely dangerous. The party saw barbed wire entanglements and many abandoned towns and trenches.

Tuesday, which was the 30th, they visited the cemetery again and attended memorial services for the dead. Later they visited Nantes and returned to Verdun. Wednesday the party left Verdun to visit the Trench of Bayonets, Fort Douamount, Trench Issuary and Fort Vaux. Going to Metz they visited the railroad station at that place, the cathedral and the park called the Esplanada, returning to Verdun that evening.

Thursday the gold star mothers left Verdun for Monfaucon, via Bras, Charny, Marne, Esnes and Malancourt. They visited Meuse, Argonne Cemetery, Blanc Mount Monument and later in the day went to Rheims to view the famous cathedral of that name.

On Friday the party was conducted from Rheims to Dise Aisne Cemetery, and thence on to Chateau Thierry, Aisne, Marne Cemetery, Balleau Wood and back to Paris. Saturday and Sunday many points and Sunday many points of renown in and around the famous French city were visited, including Versailles, Trocadeo and the Eiffel Tower. Sunday they attended church at the American Cathedral. Monday Lafayette's Escadrelle Monument was visited as well as Suresues Cemetery, the American Hospital, the Place de Ternes and Napoleon's tomb.

Tuesday was consumed by a visit to the famous Louvre and a shopping trip to Magasins du printemps. Wednesday was spent visiting Notre Dame Cathedral and a French museum. Thursday the party re-embarked for the voyage home on the S. S. Manhattan, enjoying a quiet crossing to land back in New York June 15. Another evening was spent in sight-seeing around the metroplis and the following day Mrs. Crane reached home, happy with the pleasant memories which had come through her journey.

She stated that every mother in the party seemed happy to know how wonderfully the graves of their sons were being kept on the other side. The Addison gold star mother expressed her undying gratitude to those who had made it possible for her to take this never-to-be-forgotten trip.

The only other mother in the party from this section of the state was Mrs. Ella Canfield of Friendship, N. Y.

David McKissick of New Castle, Pa., is visiting his sister, Mrs. Thomas March and family.

Boy Heroes To Go Thru Addison To World's Fair

be given an opportunity to see Chicago as a city and its numerous municipal and civic attractions, including a trip to the stock yards.

Since their exploit became known, the boys have been hailed far and wide in the newspapers of the United States as boys who think and act when occasion requires. They have been the guests of notables; they received a personal visit from that hero of all boys, Babe Ruth, and they have been nominated for Carnegie Hero Medals. Up to this time, however, a trip of less than 100 miles is the longest ride any of them ever had on a railroad. Each day they have watched the Erie Limited, with its 522,000 pound locomotive and its glistening Pullman cars, pass their home and in the heart of each one has been the wish, natural to all boys, that some day they might also ride on the Erie Limited. That wish has come true, and they will not only ride but will have at their disposal the finest accommodations of passenger train travel that are available.

Passenger Traffic Manager C. C. Howard, who has a couple of boys of his own and who therefore knows what boys like, will personally conduct the party. They have already asked a thousand questions about the railroad, the country through which it passes and of Chicago and the big exposition. Mr. Howard will see to it that their curiosity is satisfied. Word has also been received by Mr. Howard that Boys Scouts and boys from summer schools and camps along the line, will be awaiting this train at its scheduled stops to greet and do honor to the representatives of their generation who by quick thinking and acting gained for themselves fame and distinction.

1895. My father worked in the Corning Glass Works. Later he worked for three years as brakeman on the Fall Brook Railroad. I attended school in School No. 3 and the Corning Free Academy. I worked as clerk in the F. H. Cooper Grocery Store and in 1916 I went to work on the Erie Railroad as brakeman and remained there until I enlisted in the World War. I was a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and I know the needs of the railroad workers.

At the outbreak of the war I enlisted and served through all six major engagements as a Sergeant in Company D, 9th Machine Gun Batallion, 3rd Division. I was wounded in the Argonne Forest Drive and was in the hospital until November 19, 1919 when I was discharged from service and went back to work for the Erie R. R. Co., as brakeman. I was engaged in farming with my father for six years. His death in 1929 terminated this partnership and I entered the employment of the International Harvester Co., as salesman. I have not as yet asked the Government for any compensation, prefering, like hundreds of thousands of other war veterans to earn my own living as long as I am able. I do not feel that what I did for my country in the war has any bearing on the office of Sheriff. We all tried to do our duty.

In order that the people may know something of me and my activities I would mention briefly that I am Past Worshipful Master of Addison Union Lodge, F. & A. M., of Addison. Have long been a member of the Grange and served as Master for 2 years of Addison Grange. I am Past Master of Steuben County Pomona Grange and am now serving my third term as Deputy State Master for Steuben County Grange. I was active in sponsoring the economy taxation program which was carried out by the Economy Committee in this county last year, and from the extensive study of this question, that I made myself, I know I can reduce the cost of the Sheriff's department. I am married and live at 206 Campbell St., Bath, where I have been a resident for three years, moving there from Addison.

I ask the Republican men and women of Steuben County to support me at the September primary election on the platform of strict economy and efficient law enforcement.

There's ONE way to Solve THIS Housework Puzzle

● How to fit daily tasks into some sort of pattern... how to do them well, yet easily, too... how to find time for rest and recreation... these are like pieces of a giant puzzle which many housewives find almost impossible to solve.

But not those women who command a staff of tireless, efficient electrical appliances. There is hardly a household task these magical helpers cannot lighten—and do better. The minutes they save in smaller jobs, like mixing the cake batter, plus the half-hours and hours they save in major tasks, like ironing, add new time for leisure—for doing those things you most enjoy.

And remember, electrical servants ask humble wages—pennies only. All, from refrigerator to iron, are priced for 1933. Just see us or ASK ANY DEALER.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

SOUND SENSE

I still hear murmurings of "acidosis." So I ask my reader to pay attention to this: Acidosis means STARVATION somewhere. A very extreme, wasting disease, in advanced stage may produce acidosis; unless you are in that sort of fix, forget the acidosis bogey.

And the constant buzz about "vitamin-this, and vitamin-that." It is getting to be almost a worry for anxious mothers and exotic dads. Listen: If you are eating good, wholesome foods, that are digested without being uncomfortable, then you are getting all the vitamins you need—maybe more—so why waste time on vitamins?

Then, the milk craze. Say, do you know that Americans are the most gullible people on earth? About diet? Yes, diet, above all things! A notorious quack in this neighborhood is cramming all the victims he can lay hands on, with skim-milk! He says it's man's natural food, and no other is genuine. And he has many "converts."

But, listen: The prospective mother of any young animal is supplied with a laboratory within her body, that produces milk for the new-born progeny. As soon as that baby—be it man, pig or calf—is old enough to use other food and is "weaned," other foods become his normal dietary; he actually needs other food that fits him for his natural mode of living. To surfeit the adult human being with milk is to overload him with a sort of protein that he would be better without. Let milk stay in its proper place.

Commercialism is carrying everything before it—just greed and mercenary cunning. If I were to try to follow up all the foisted "essentials" of the peddlers of this country, and take everything that the hawkers say is best for me, I should be a penniless idiot in less than a year. Let's be sensible.

Any Mower Needs An Overhauling

Mowing hay is a two-horse job when the mower is in good condition, but a mower in poor condition takes about a third more power, or it should take three horses, according to B. A. Jennings of the New York state college of agriculture. Instead of using the extra horse the team is maybe forced to a dog-trot to keep the machine cutting. Mowers need an overhauling every year whether they are old or new, and regardless of whether times are good or bad.

The overhauling is a home job that requires a few tools and is confined to the cutting bar end of the machine. A mowing machine is like a pair of shears, he says, and if shears are to cut both blades must be sharp and must fit together. A bent blade, a dull blade, or a loose screw affects the shearing action.

It is customary to sharpen the mowing machine knives every day, but it is just as important to have the other half of the shears sharp. On the mower, the other half of the shears are steel plates rivited to the guard; they are called ledger plates. The only way to resharpen the ledger plates is to replace them. They can be replaced by buying new guards but the plate is cheaper than the guard.

Then straighten the guards. A straight edge tells if any guard is high or low. It may then be pounded down or up, for the guards are malleable and will not break. The wear plates may need replacing and the clips tightened so the knife moves freely; the clips and wear plates are like the screw which holds a pair of shears together. Then adjust the drag brace, the brace in front of the pitman bar, so the knives move from the center of one guard to the center of the next guard. This insures clean cutting. A small anvil, made by most machinery manufacturers, is the only extra equipment needed on most farms to overhaul a mower, he says. The anvil is cheap and is handy to remove and to clinch rivets.

Dirty eggs, washed or unwashed, showed bacteria in the yolks and whites thirty days later; only a few clean washed eggs contained bacteria thirty days later, regardless of the way they were washed.

SYRACUSE-COLGATE GAME MAY BE ICE CREAM PARTY

Syracuse and Colgate football fans will be thrown into a state of consternation when they learn that F. M. Tisdale and Winston Anderson, captains of next fall's Syracuse and Colgate football teams respectively, are working side by side this summer. Dr. Laurie D. Cox of the New York State College of Forestry, former coach of lacrosse at Syracuse made this discovery on a tour just completed of the Central New York State Parks for which he is landscape advisor.

At Gilbert Lake, one of the State parks located in the mountains back of Oneonta, N. Y., Coach Cox recognized the stalwart form of Anderson in a bathing suit perched on the observation seat of the official life guard. Almost immediately thereafter he ran into Tisdale in charge of the refreshment concession at the lake. This startling situation was enough to give any Syracuse or Colgate man pause. Naturally, Anderson will patronize Tisdale's refreshment stand and Tisdale may be found assisting his traditional rival in life saving, if a situation should develop where help is needed. And when the park business closes for the day, there will be saunterings and talks and, of course, no small portion of these conversations will concern football.

One may wonder what will happen when the ancient Syracuse-Colgate battle flames anew next November. Will the old, belligerent spirit be vitiated and the dove of peace hover over this classic battle, which in the past, has been so fiercely fought? Will Anderson be attending one of Tisdale's ice cream parties in November? Or will Tisdale be saving Anderson's life as he goes down in a flood of Orange jersies. Will the game lose its gladitorial aspects and become a series of courtesies between Alphonse and Gaston? Colgate partisans may think of asking Anderson to get a job in another park. On the other hand, the followers of Syracuse, which has suffered a long line of defeats by a classic rival, may see in this warm weather fraternity between these captain gridiron warriors an opportunity for Tisdale to break the jinx by finding out enough about Colgate strategy over the ice cream counter to "beat Colgate".

At Gilbert Lake, as least, the battle flags of the two institutions have been furled. Cleated shoes and headgears have been banished from the picture of soft skies, rippling waters and pine scented summer days by these two friendly enemies—jitters on the part of the undergraduates and alumni notwithstanding.

Farm Bureaus Combine For a Century of Progress Tour

Farm bureau leaders of Chemung, Livingston and Steuben Counties, in conference with railroad officials at Bath Friday, completed details of the Farm Bureau-Century of Progress tour.

The movement for the three counties will be by special train over the D. L. & W the morning of July 23 to Buffalo to join with similar groups from all parts of New York state. The various sectional groups will converge into one big party and travel over the New York Central to Chicago, arriving at the midwest metropolis at 8:40 P. M. De-Luxe observation cars and other special equipment are to be included in these excursion trains.

The headquarters of the party in Chicago will be the Croydon Hotel. Two and a half days will be spent at the Fair with the privilege of extending the visit for ten days. On the return the party will leave Chicago at 2 P. M. Wednesday and go to Cleveland by special train. There it will board one of the new Great Lakes boats for an overnight trip to Buffalo, returning home Thursday morning.

In order that those who are interested in the tour may know what the World's Fair is like and get complete details of the trip, a meeting is to be held in the Bath Municipal Hall the evening of July 6, at which the latest moving pictures of the Century of Progress will be shown.

Worm-Free Lambs Bring Most Money

"Flocks that are not free from stomach worms have a larger proportion of medium lambs that bring a cent less a pound than good lambs; besides, the medium lambs are twenty pounds lighter", Robert Francisco of Rushville tells Professor W. T. Grams of the state college of agriculture. "And in addition", he says, "ewes free from worms last two or more years longer in the flock".

Many shepherds, Professor Grams says, have drenched their flocks in the past to avoid losses. Many flocks now carry an infection of worms, but the flock is either strong enough or has such care that it can overcome the damaging effects of the worms. Such infections may become general if the flock's vitality is weakened or should the season be wet, unless the flock receives regular treatment.

The recommended treatments for worms have been changed in recent years. The old copper sulphate treatment and the nicotine treatment are now combined. The copper sulphate, or bluestone, is mixed in the proportion of four ounces of copper sulphate to three gallons of water. One ounce or forty per cent nicotine sulphate is added to each gallon of the copper sulphate solution. The dose for strong, mature sheep is three fluid ounces; for lambs, one to two ounces depending on their size, age and condition.

Tetrachlorethylene solution has also proved effective. This substance can be purchased at drug stores in capsule form under several trade names. One capsule is a dose. The capsules are slightly more expensixe than the home-made treatment but many shepherds prefer the prepared doses. Better results are obtained, Professor Grams says, if two or more treatments are given alternately, a month apart. The copper sulphate-nicotine may be given the first time the flock is drenched. It is advisable, he says, to withhold feed and water from the flock from eighteen to twenty-four hours before treatment and three or four hours after treatment.

ANIMAL RESEARCH GIVES AID TO MEDICAL SCIENCE

Research with animals has frequently provided valuable information in the treatment of human disorders. The common treatment for hookworm is a case in point. As a result of research work in the prevention of hookworms in dogs, more than 15,000,000 treatments of human beings have been used effectively since 1921 when the remedy was discovered.

The drug, carbon tetrachloride, developed for the purpose by the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, has been found to be effective also for the removal of various species of parasites in other animals such as horses, cats and foxes. Carbon tetrachloride is also used in practically all parts of the world for the treatment of liver-fluke infestation of sheep. This condition alone requires millions of treatments each year.

Since discovering the treatment, Dr. Maurice C. Hall, in cooperation with Dr. J. E. Shillinger, both of the department, found that tetrachlorethylene, a similar chemical was a safer drug for the expulsion of hookworms from small animals and for that reason it has largely replaced carbon tetrachloride for the treatment of small animals in veterinary practice, and is being used to an increasing extent for the treatment of human hookworm disease.

In addition to treatment, the flock should be given fresh pasture as often as possible. A flock always does better, whether they have worms or not, if they have fresh pasture frequently; but if they are treated and then given frequent changes of pasture, better health and better gains are secured, he says.

Dyeing will renew the service of a faded straw hat. Mix commercial cotton fabric dye with denatured alcohol. Apply the mixture to the hat with a varnish brush, or dip the whole hat in the solution. Press, re-block and apply a thin coat of hat dye or shellac, diluted with denatured alcohol.

4-H CLUB NEWS

Projects Make Them Pals

If a father grows tired of reminding a son continually of chores that fall to his share of the work, get the boy started on a 4-H project. That will change things all over according to a New Hampshire club boy. The lad should know for he says club projects have hade him and his father real pals.

The boy is George Gilpatrick, Jr. of the Concord vicinity, and he is state poultry champion. No longer, in fact not for some time, has Father Gilpatrick been heard to say: "George, have you fed the hens?" or "George, do the hens have water?", or something else like it which many boys have heard so often they feel they are being "dinged" at.

It is all changed when the boy is given a proprietary interest in the hens, or what else he has to care for. It is a very handy arrangement for a boy to have charge of the poultry because the returns are daily, or at least so during most of the year. The egg yield tells the story of what the flock is doing, as there are eggs to be gathered every day during the productive season.

If Johnny fails to feed or water the hens properly he knows full well it will tell its own story. The New Hampshire boy got so deeply interested in poultry after he started that in three years he has built up a fine producing flock, using three houses, all electrically lighted and fully equipped He started with 10 hens which his father sold him, and built the first house with lumber laying around the place. The boy uses nothing but the best stock and produces fancy broilers as well as select eggs.

Production Records Help Sell Stock

The records which had been made in the Ketch Brothers herd, members of the Cohocton Valley Cow Testing Association, helped to sell several head of registered Holstein cows and heifers consigned by these breeders at the recent Earlville sale. This use of the records is cited by tester George Arnold as one of the benefits of membership in the association.

Mr. Arnold reports that in the month of May a five-year-old Holstein cow in the herd of Murray Barnes of Avoca, made a production of 77 pounds of fat and 1711 pounds of milk, and a Holstein cow in the Davenport Home herd placed second with 71 pounds of fat and 2139 pounds of milk. Smith Beilby of Bath, I. J. Calkins, Avoca, each had 14 cows on the honor roll. Edward Heinaman of Bath had 11; Mrs. S. E. Harding of Hornell 6; and Claud Whitford and Murray Barnes of Avoca, 5 each.

Ketch Bros., Wallace and S. H. Lyke, Howard, each had 4 and Davenport Home herds had 4 and 3. Andrew Kurtz of Cohocton and 3 as did John Kinsman of Kanona and John Hewlett & Sons of Bath. Chas. Scudder of Campbell and A. W. Norris of Kanona each had 2.

Production records as made in the cow testing association establish a true value of dairy cows and help to sell good cattle at better than average prices, Mr. Arnold states in commenting on the experience of Ketch Bros. The records aid the owner in establishing a true value of the cows in the herd and influences the buyer to pay the higher prices that the better cows are worth.

THE HOG PROBLEM

American hog farmers are beset with an excess of production because of a severe contraction in their export outlet, just as are wheat growers and cotton farmers. Where the American hog farmer averaged 20 foreign customers for pork in the 1926-29 period, he had only eight left in 1932. And were he had forty foreign customers for lard during this same predepression period, he had less than 30 in 1932.

The shrinkage in exports during the past year alone was equivalent by weight to approximately a half million market-weight hogs, reports the United States Department of Agriculture. And the difference between exports last year and our record peace-time exports in 1923, before Eupropean Agriculture began to recover substantially from the war, is equivalent to about 8,000,000 hogs. To put it another way, the decrease in annual exports since 1923 is equivalent to one hog out of every six hogs in the Corn Belt farm feed lots this year.

NEW DISINFECTANT

A search by the United States Department of Agriculture for new and better disinfectants against livestock diseases has disclosed that sodium orthophenylphenate is highly effective in destroying tubercle bacilli on premises where tuberculosis is being eradicated. The new disinfectant is especially suitable for use around dairy and farm buildings since unlike many other germicides, it has only a slight odor. It is readily soluble in water and is not severly poisonous to livestock.

The Bureau of Animal Industry points out that certain highly poisonous substances, such as hydrocyanic-acid gas, though very effective against insects, have practically no effect against disease germs. In using the new disinfectant it is necessary that the solution ve applied at a temperature of 60 degrees F. or more, explains Dr. M. Dorset, of the Bichemic Division, under whose direction the effectiveness of this chemical was established. Sodium orthophenylphenate, when properly used, promises to be a valuable aid in the disinfection of premises where tuberculosis has existed. The product is now being made commercially.

SNAPPY MILK DRINKS

Here is another of the delicious and cooling milk drinks recommended by the Consumers Information Service of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets. Try this one for that hot afternoon thirst:

HAPPY FARMER

Separate the white from the yolk of an egg. Add a pinch of salt to the white and beat until stiff, gradually adding one tablespoon powdered sugar, ¼ teaspoon maple flavoring and the well beaten yolk. Add one cup milk. Serve cold in tall chilled glasses.

For additional milk drink recipes, write to the Consumers Information Service, State Department of Agriculture and Markets, Albany, for the booklet "Snappy Milk Drinks."

Must "Chase" Beetles From Cucumber Vines

Probably no insect is more familiar in the garden than the tiny, black and yellow striped beetles that infest the cucumber and melon plants often to their complete destruction. Certainly there is no garden pest harder to control, for the cucumber beetle simply will not "stay put" until he can be poisoned or smoothered to death. Controlling cucumber beetles is largely a matter of "chasing" the bugs out of one field into another, Declares Dr. H. C. Huckett, entomologist at the State Experiment Station at Geneva. Dr. Huckett made a number of experiments on Long Island where cucumber beetles are often troublesome, and his suggestions for combating this pest are believed to be generally applicable wherever the insects are abundant. His recommendations are given in Circular No. 113, which may be had free of charge upon request to the Station.

The beetles appear soon after the plants are above the ground, and the peiod of greatest danger extends from the time the seedlings break thru until they are four to six weeks old, or until the plants are well established, says Dr. Huckett. Hand spraying or hand dusting are the only effective means of applying insecticides for the cucumber beetles, he says, because the application must be so thorough. Sprays are less harmful to the plants than dusts, but to offset this hand dusting is so much more quickly done than hand spraying that dusting will probably be resorted to in large plantings.

The most effective spray mixture used in the Station tests contained 3 pounds of calcium arsenate, 3 pounds of kayso, and 50 gallons of water. The best dust mixture was composed of 1 pound of calcium arsenate and 15 pounds of gypsum or land plaster. Hydrated lime may be used instead of gypsum, but its use increases the danger of plant injury. Whether dusts or sprays are used, the plants must be thoroughly covered, especially around the base of the stems and at the tender shoots. An effective means of destroying large numbers of cucumber beetles tried out in the Station tests was to provide a supply of squash seedlings in the cucumber field as "trap" plants. The squash seedlings were not sprayed or dusted and the beetles tended to congregate on them in large numbers as they were driven from the cucumber plants. By the judicious application of a blow torch large nnumbers of the beetles were then easily destroyed on the trap plants.

The best time to install a ventilation system for the dairy stable is when the hay mow is empty. The free Cornell bulletin E-151 describes the Fairbanks-Goodman system of ventilation and tells how the intake and out-take flues are built. The system may be home-made and those who have installed the system say it works despite its simplicity. Costs vary according to the dairyman's adaptation of the plans but are low compared to built-in systems. Ask the office of publication of the New York state college of agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y., for your copy of bulletin E-151.

Apples, peaches, pears, and cherries may all be preserved successfuly by drying in the oven.

How What and Why?

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State colleges of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Strawberry Borer

H. B. asks: My young strawberry plants were eaten full of holes last season by small black bugs. They eat into the center of the plant and then it dies. What spray can I use next year?"

Professor Glenn W. Herrick says, "I am unable to say definitely whether your strawberries have been injured by the strawberry crown borer or by the strawberry crown girdler. I suspect, however, it is the latter. The strawberry crown girdler is a black beetle which seems to be controlled best by using a poisoned bait composed of ground dried apples, 19 pounds, and magnesium arsenate, 1 pound.

Ordinary dried or evaporated apples run through a meat chopper and then thoroughly mixed with the poison have given good results. The poison bait is scattered among the plants on the ground where the beetles will eat it."

Mildew on Dorothy Perkins Roses

W. B. R. asks: "Mildew attacked my Dorothy Perkins rose last season and the buds are blasted. What can I do for it this year?"

Professor M. F. Barrus says, "Powdery mildew of roses can be controlled by spraying or dusting the plants with sulfur. The disease, however, is not so easy to control on some varieties like Dorothy Perkins and rambler roses in general as some other less susceptible varieties. We prefer to use dusting sulfur because it is easy to apply. You should obtain a fine grade of dusting sulfur from a seed store or other distributor. A small hand duster can usually be purchased at such places at a reasonable price. The plants should receive a light application of the dust at least once every week, beginning when the mildew first appears. When the mildew has disappeared as a result of these treatments, the period between applications can be lengthened. Should you prefer to spray rather than to dust, use one of the so-called wettable sulfurs which can also be obtained at seed stores. The directions for their use are printed on the containers.

It is important in controlling this disease, whether you use dust or spray, to make the applications frequently and thoroughly enough to prevent new infections. The microscopic spores, or seeds, on the funscopic spores, or seeds, of the fungus are formed on the moldy areas carried by air currents to healthy leaves and stems where they cause further infections. The object of applying sulfur to the plant is to prevent these infections from taking place and to destroy the moldy patches that are already present.

Since the fungus overwinters, to a certain extent at least, on the fallen infected leaves, you should carefully rake up and burn these leaves this fall. In pruning your rose bush, it is well to remove badly infected canes and burn them."

SHOULD NOT SEE TIMOTHY BLOOM

Timothy cut as young as second crop timothy is ordinarily mowed contains four times as much protein to a pound of carbohydrates and fats as timothy cut when it is nearly ripe, and is nearly as good hay as clover cut in full bloom, according to E. Van Alstine of the New York state college of agriculture. The same timothy, if allowed to get ripe before it is cut, is just one grade better than wheat straw; and the next grade below wheat straw is excelsior, he says.

An added advantage to early cutting is that the second crop grows faster and makes good pasture when the usual pastures are too short to furnish much feed. The pasturing does little harm to the meadow and allows the permanent grass pasture to rest and get a new start for later fall feeding.

Early cut hay may be harder to cure in stormy weather but late cut hay can never furnish as much feed. The timothy cut before it is in blossom contains one-fifth more protein than hay made when the timothy is in full bloom, and nearly twice the protein of hay that is nearly ripe. And protein, he adds, is the expensive part of the dairy grain mixture.

Cooling Milk Drinks Advised For the Good Old Summer Time

Commissioner Baldwin [illegible] of the Soda Fountain Season—Milk Drinks Can Be Mixed at Home

By CHARLES H. BALDWIN
Commissioner, Department of Agriculture and Markets Albany, New York

COMES the good old summer time, and with it the immediate thought of cool summer drinks. Soda fountains blossom in all their mirrored and nickeled glory. One might almost declare that the clatter of falling bottle caps drowns the boom of the surf at popular seaside resorts. That great American institution, the ice cream soda, reigns supreme again throughout the land.

Liquid concoctions of myriad flavors and every color of the rainbow, of attention-grasping names and in many shaped bottles, are consumed by the millions of gallons and are to be found at convenient stands wherever the thirsty summer traveler may wander, although they may be called generically soda, or pop, or tonic, or something else, depending on the part of these United States one happens to be in.

Nothing Better than Milk

But let me tell my readers, if they do not know it or realize it already, that there is nothing in the world more cooling, more satisfying and more healthful as a summer drink than milk.

And do not for one minute think that milk, because it is the commonest, as well as the best, of all foods, need ever be a monotonous drink. Variety almost unlimited is possible in preparing milk drinks, without impairing in the slightest the tremendous health advantages of milk as a drink.

Last month the people of our State voted on the question of repealing the eighteenth amendment. Shortly before that, beer of a certain alcoholic content became legal in the Nation. Whether one's inclinations are "wet" or "dry", drinks per se became a decided topic of conversation and attention generally.

Consumers Information Service of our State Department of Agriculture and Markets has quite naturally felt the spirit of the times and has recognized the widespread interest in drink recipes. But the drinks with which Consumers Information Service is concerned do not require a wink for their mixing or a constitutional amendment for their use anywhere. They simply offer interesting and tasty ways of serving the most satisfying of all summer drinks—milk.

Guide for Milk Mixers

Drop a postal card to Consumers Information Service State Department of Agriculture and Markets. Albany, N. Y., and ask for a copy of the leaflet, "Snappy Milk Drinks." There is no charge to any reader of this newspaper for one of these pamphlets, and you are sure not only to be interested but also surprised to see the variety of attractive ways of preparing cool milk drinks.

How about an "Old Glory" on Independence Day? "Coffee Frost" suggests in its very name the essence of cool refreshment and delicate aroma. "Mellow Moon" is calculated to attract a thirsty soul's immediate attention. There are egg noggs, milk drink specials, milk shakes, fruit flavored milk drinks, malted milks and honey and milk drinks, explicitly described as to their preparation and all amusingly and attractively printed.

So, as the days grow warmer and the hot summer sun shines brighter, "Here's how—with a cool milk drink!"

A USEFUL BULLETIN

Some suggestions for organizing the farm business, or Cornell bulletin E-250, are available on request to the office of publication of the New York state college of agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y. The bulletin concludes with a rhyme:

Successful is he who knows what things cost,
Who knows where he profits, and where he has lost,
Who knows what might pay, and what never can,
For he plans his work, then works his plan.

Use hot milk and butter in mashed potatoes to make them fluffy when well beaten.

"ALMOST MARRIED" IS THRILLER OF THRILLERS

One of the most wierd and amazing photoplays that this reviewer has ever seen if not the most hair-raising in the history of the talking screen, "Almost Married," the new Fox thriller will open its local engagement Friday and Saturday at the Star Theatre.

Gifted with splendid acting by its capable cast, intelligent direction and a story that is human and believable as well as gripping and eerie, it held its first audience spellbound until its very last fade out.

Revolving around the mad machinations of a demented genius, a crazed musician, who is bent upon destroying those he loves dearest, it depicts the struggle of two young people to free themselves from the spell of terror he has cast over them.

Deserving of special praise is the performance of Violet Heming, the Broadway stage star who makes her screen debut in the leading role. Likewise, Ralph Bellamy, as her lover, and Alexander Kirkland, whose portrayal of the mad genius is one of the outstanding characterizations of the year. Allan Dinehart, Grace Hampton, Maria Alba, Eva Dennison, Herbert Bunston and Herbert Mundin are also excellent in the other roles of importance.

"Almost Married" was directed by William Cameron Menzies, ace mystry director of Hollywood, who co-directed the recent Fox success, "The Spider." It was adapted for the screen from Andrew Soutar's novel, "The Devil's Triangle," by Wallace Smith.

Addison Hit Hard Against Knoxville

Visiting Pitchers Treated Roughly By Local Hitters

The hard hitting of the Addison clubbers subdued Knoxville to the tune of 11 to 4, at Tuscarora Field Sunday and sent the local team again into a tie for first place in the Tri-County League standings. Pitcher Don Kelts, the visitors starting selection, failed to last the first inning, while Gillette was nicked consistently by the local swatters. Hewson turned in four, Laffkas and LaChance three hits each. Hewson also stole six bases, being entirely too elusive for the Knoxville boys. Addison also played fast ball, the errors charged against them being on hurried throws to complete double plays. The outfield, led by Riffle, handled eight chances, some of them hard running catches in fine style. Grange pitched consistent ball all through the game He shut out the visitors for four innings and then coasted in behind the substantial lead piled up by his team mates. He was master of the situation at all times.

Hewson started festivities by a single, quickly stole second and third. Young walked and stole second. Then the avalanche started. Hoyt, J. Grange, Laffkas and LaChance came through with doubles and Addison was away to a five run lead enough to win the game. Laffkas' single and Riker's triple added another tally in the third and Hewson scored a run with little help in the fourth. He beat a clever bunt, stole second and third and came home on Riffle's fly to left. LaChance drove out a hit in the sixth, stole second and counted on Hewson's hit. In the seventh, safe drives by Laffkas and Riker followed by LaChance's four base wallop counted three more. Singles by Gillette and Clark and Hertz's double gave Knoxville their first run in the fifth and they added one in the seventh and eighth.

Next Sunday, Addison goes over to Wellsboro to meet Sike Boom's team.

Commencement Festivities To Interest Many

The fifty-eighth annual commencement of Addison High School promises to be one of the most interesting weeks ever held here.

The activities will commence with an innovation for Addison High School, a senior sing to be held on the school campus Saturday evening. Sunday evening the annual baccalaureate sermon will be delivered in the Church of the Redeemer by the Rev. Thomas A. Withey. Monday the senior picnic well be held at Lake Salubria, near Bath.

Tuesday evening the annual commencement exercises will be held in the high school auditorium. Departing from the precedent of several years, no outside speaker will be engaged to address the class at the fifty-eighth commencement. Instead, the school will return to an older custom, that of having a number of the seniors read their own essays. To many this new-old arrangement will seem a welcome change, it being held that the evening might better be given over to the graduates, than to an exposition for the graduates.

Wednesday evening, the alumni banquet will be served to all graduates of the school.

This year the Addison Advertiser will cover all the activities of commencement week, and include a number of essays and addresses which have been prepared by members of the class of 1933, as well as the picture of the 1933 seniors. This special paper will be the class organ for the year, making up in a measure for the seniors not having a "Standard."

COMMUNICATION

IMPORTANT TO TOWN CLERKS:

We are enclosing a blank form, requesting information relative to the licensing of dogs as provided by Section 109 of the Agriculture and Markets Law.

Because of the lateness of the season, it is very important that we have this information by July 1.

All dogs on the list of owners furnished you, must be accounted for. Every effort should be made to clean up the unlicensed dogs which include puppies that have become six months old.

We believe every opportunity has been given such owners to secure their license, and that further delay is unnecessary.

We thank you for your co-operation in this matter.

CHARLES H. BALDWIN
Commissioner.

IT TAKES TWO KEYS

To open a box in our safe deposit vault. One is the master key, which we retain. It only half unlocks the boxes. The other is held by the renter of the box, and cannot operate the box, until our key has been used.

This is only one feature of the many details of safety which make our vaults secure.

Visit our vault. A box costs $3.00 a year, less than a cent a day.
